The Bluegrass State can refer to either the rolling pastures full of thoroughbred horses or the wonderful native music with guitar, banjo, mandolin, and bass. Bourbon is a whiskey specific to Kentucky just like champagne is specific to the Champagne province of France. Many think that Kentucky is quite the poor state in this country, but this area of Kentucky is quite the contrary. Horse barns more elegant than most houses of America. The country is quite inviting although its dogs are a bit frisky if you know what I mean. I am known as “the dog whisperer” so stick with me on the road.

Saturday, September 2 (67mi, 3370ft climbing)

We invade Indiana just like the Confederates' did in 1863 in the Civil War. But this time over the Big 4 Bridge. The history of Indiana along the Ohio River includes the buffalo trace, riverboat building, and the underground railroad. In Corydon, the very fine horses of Morgan's Calvary were finally caught and surrendered their morganians which I hope we'll see in the rolling countryside. Corydon is also the first state capital of Indiana.

Sunday, September 3 (57mi, 2907ft climbing)

After another night in Louisville, and hopefully not too much bourbon or even bluegrass, we leave this river city, along Old Frankfort Pike. We head to Shelbyville with a couple of distilleries along the way.

Monday, September 4 (62mi, 4096ft climbing)

We ride to Kentucky's State Capitol and along the Kentucky River, and I can't forget the multitude of hills whole lot of hills today while we reach a couple more distilleries. I've heard that Woodford Reserve is worth the stop. I plan on rubbing a shot on my knees! We then bluegrass country at Midway and arrive in Georgetown. Good job!

Tuesday, September 5 (61mi, 3604ft climbing)

Today is all about the horses. It is a known fact that the roads are the smoothest, and that's for all the horses traveling in their trailers. A stop at the Kentucky Horse Park is well worth the time and expense to learn about thoroughbred horse racing. We again ride through Midway and then the famous Keeneland racetrack. Today's ride ends in Versailles.

Wednesday, September 6 (61mi, 3466ft climbing)

We head southwest into the heart of Bourbon country, and the final stop is Bardstown, the Bourbon capital of the world. Also is the Old Kentucky Home, Stephen Foster's mansion.

Thursday, September 7 (64mi, 1412ft climbing)

We finish our tour by skirting around a rather large arboretum and then Jim Beam Distillery. We approach Louisville from the southwest as we ride along the Ohio River. We'll stop by Churchill Downs and through the Louisville University and appreciate our rather flat day. Overnight lodging is included so drink all the bourbon you'd like.
